

70 Bloodwood Street, Zuccoli

Hey Google

Hey Google, can you drop the drop the blinds please and turn the lights on in the living room.

Welcome to the solar powered "Tech House", positioned in the master planned suburban setting of Zuccoli, this home has been crafted by the team at KTM Homes with an unrivalled attention to detail. On top of that, the owner has loaded the home with automation to make your life easy with just the push of a button.

At street level the home is lit up with decorative lighting that can change to suit your footy team colours, birthday parties or just for fun. The front door has a passcode entry and inside even the lights can be controlled and colour changed as well. The irrigation can be run on your phone from the comfort of your couch and you can even tell the blinds to go down by just saying "hey google".

The kitchen has stone counters and banks of built in storage in timeless white tones and overlooks the open plan living and dining areas. All of the bedrooms are spacious and the master includes an elegantly appointed ensuite bathroom and walk through robe.
